

About Us:

If you love to sing with other people, and are looking for a tribe, come check us out!

Oly Oral Tradition is a loose-knit group of people who love to sing together. We meet once a month in a public place.

Participation is spontaneous - we invite you to lead a song when you feel ready. If two people happen to feel ready at the same time, basic courtesy dictates who goes first. Our one rule is to respect each other regardless of experience and/or vocal volume. We strongly believe that each of us has something good to offer!

What do we sing?

That depends entirely on who shows up and what they want to offer. There is no set repertoire, or printed handouts.

Bring all your songs — drinking songs, work songs, sea chanteys, camp songs, songs of war, songs of peace, happy or sad or silly or furious,

We lean toward traditional songs from varying traditions; mostly, but not exclusively, in English, mostly, but not exclusively, having a chorus we can all sing along with.

Don't have a song to bring?

No problem! Join in on the choruses and learn as you go. No experience or repertoire required.

Our mailing list is from a Google Group. The Google Group is a place where you can communicate with me and other members, and you are welcome to share your comments and ideas there.

If you want to join or have questions, email me at chrisroe@folkhosts.com and I'll get back to you!
